Watching

Typhoons

Typhoon No. 29 (Koguma) is passing well east of Japan and becomes an ordinary low by Wed 14. No. 28 has already weakened. Rough seas off the Pacific coast until then, gone well before you land. No other systems are forecast toward Japan or Hong Kong. Hong Kong's season usually winds down by the end of October.

How much rain is that

Under 1 mm
Likely dry, a few spits at most.

1 to 5 mm
Light rain. Umbrella, carry on.

5 to 15 mm
Steady rain. Wet shoes, views gone.

Over 15 mm
Heavy. Move outdoor plans.

Chance and amount

The percentage is the chance of at least 1 mm of rain in that time. The millimetres are the single most likely amount. So 40% with under 1 mm means probably dry, with a fair chance of a light shower.

How sure is each day

Firm	Within 5 days. Plan on it.
Fair	6 to 10 days. The pattern is right, the timing of rain can shift a day.
Outlook	11 days or more. A trend from long-range models, not a forecast. Don't move anything yet.

Which source wins: far out, every source counts the same and a split is flagged. Inside about 5 days, the local forecasters lead: the Japan Meteorological Agency, Weathernews and the Japan Weather Association in Japan, the Hong Kong Observatory in Hong Kong. The Global Forecasting Model becomes a cross-check only.
